Double master for Red Eye Constructions and Interiors

A leading Central Coast building company has taken out two major awards at the 2019 Master Builders Association – Newcastle Excellence in Building Awards, held in Newcastle on 13 September.

Red Eye Constructions and Interiors was awarded best Commercial Projects – Under $5 Million, and Best Use of Timber, with both acknowledgements recognising the impressive expansion project at Brokenwood Wines, Pokolbin, which involved building a new Cellar Door, restaurant and museum.

Based at Berkley Vale, Red Eye's General Manager Michael Robertson said the two awards collectively represent what can happen when they walk beside their partners.

"This kind of industry recognition, and working with Brokenwood, really reflects how a great partnership can create an even greater result," Michael said.

"We're really proud of this project and also to have our efforts acknowledged in this year's awards."

With a $50 million annual turnover, and a team of more than 50, Red Eye has delivered major building and fit-out projects across New South Wales, Queensland and Victoria.

Specialising in building health, commercial and education projects, the company has expanded its services and company name.

Mark Perry has been appointed as Design Manager to help guide Red Eye's next development phase having now established a stand-alone design and construct interior fit-out division. Mark has more than 25 years' design experience in corporate, workplace, retail and hospitality, and brings a high level of understanding and expertise.

He is joined by Tom Ryan who is responsible for Interiors Delivery and Project Management. Tom leads the on-time and on-budget delivery of all Red Eye Interiors projects which are underpinned by the company's strict quality control and site safety performance.

The expansion is Red Eye's response to an increase in demand to provide an all-inclusive approach to creating quality building projects.

The company now delivers professional design, refurbishment and fit-out services for interior projects between $250,000 to $2 million, providing the necessary focus for growth.

"With our proven construction and buildability pedigree, Red Eye Interiors perfectly positions our point of difference by offering specific design expertise attached to every project we undertake," Michael said.

"This is further supported by having joinery and electrical trade services in-house, giving us far greater control over costs and programming when compared to using external sub-contractors.

"We're able to keep our promises on cost control and project delivery whether it's for big construction jobs or separate design and construct fit-outs – or both together."
